This transport included at least 204 employees of the Jewish Community in Berlin. Under the threat of hostages being shot, they had to present themselves for deportation with their families. This deportation measure is therefore known in Berlin also as the “Community Campaign”.

One person from Cottbus and another from Neustadt (Dosse) were attached to the transport. With an average age of 43 years, the deportees included 55 children up to the age of ten. The participants of this “22nd Transport to the East” from Berlin, departing from Moabit Station, were likewise murdered in the forests near Riga
